ELYRIA CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL MOVEMENT BECOMES INTERNATIONAL IN ITS SCOPE

National Rotary Club to Take Action in Meeting at Chicago in August—Local Hospital Now Accommodates 82 Tots Who Hope to Shed Shackles of Deformities

That the Ohio Rotary club movement will become a national movement, and eventually an international movement for the aid of crippled children is the belief of E. F. Allen, superintendent of the Gates Home for Crippled Children.

So strongly has the movement grown that Superintendent Allen and Superintendent Tall of Memorial hospital have been invited to meet the National Rotary directors in Chicago in August, and at least Mr. Allen will be present.

Elyria to be Center

In the event that the movement becomes nation wide it is hoped that this city will be chosen as the center of the movement for here it was started, and here it is at the height of its influence and work.

The Gates home that originally cared for a few children increased its activities during the past year over one hundred per cent. It has been possible to care for thirty-six little cripples, but now it is equipped to care for eighty-two. No other hospital in the United States has an equal capacity, and the work is yet in its infancy. The Gates home is far in the lead in its manner of handling such cases. A corps of the very best experts have been carefully selected, and a clinic established that gives every child a careful analysis of its needs. Experts in every possible line go over its little body both mentally and physically and they are charted in a manner that no single physician or surgeon would be able to do. When a child is finaly accepted the hospital knows all about the little cripple and what is necessary to do in order to improve its condition.

Aids Poor Child

Because a child is poor and its parents unable to pay for its care and operative treatment, is no bar to its admission, for there are now more of that class of patients than there are paying ones. The state is taking an active interest in the work, and for every dollar that is raised for that purpose the state gives an equal amount. After a child has been the subject of a special clinic a complete record of the case is sent to the state department of health, and they are kept informed of what is being done for its relief.

Should the movement become national as it is believed it will, and if Elyria should be chosen as the headquarters for the movement it will be a great boost for this city and will give it a reputation in humanitarian circles second to none.

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

According to police reports, Mrs. Davidson left her husband several weeks ago and had been sharing an apartment with a woman friend The shooting occurred in this apartment after a quarrel.

RAIL UNIONS BARE TEETH TO MAGNATES

(International News Service.)

CHICAGO, July 5.—Organized rail labor today "bared its teeth" to the railroad managements.

A curt warning, an ultimatum in fact, to the railroads that no further encroachments will be tolerated on wages and working conditions was being drawn up here today by the heads of the "big four" brotherhoods and fourteen other rail organizations. This warning, couched in unmistakable language, will be presented to the railroad managements within the next few days.

The decision to send an ultimatum to the railroads was reached after a 48 hour conference of union leaders.

The "big four" leaders counselled a peaceful attitude while the pandits were lead by the shop craft workers. The "ultimatum" was in effect a compromise. The warning however, it was indicated will include acceptance of the 12 percent wage reductions ordered by the railway labor board and effective July 1.

The "big four" have voted to accept the wage reduction but agreed to oppose any further cuts. The shop crafts workers voted to reject the wage cuts and sought support among other unions in making a stand at this time. The "big four" it is understood, succeeded in winning a majority of the sixteen affiliations to their viewpoint. The demand for some definite policy in regard to the acceptance of further reductions led to the "ultimatum." This document, it was indicated, with accept the 12 percent cut ordered by the labor board but will present a united stand of all railroad unions in rejecting any changes in working conditions or further cuts in wages.

LONDON, July 5—Progress towards unity in Ireland as a preliminary step to Premier Lloyd George's proposed peace parley in London was the outstanding result of the initial Sinn Fein unionist conference at Dublin, it was generally admitted today.

Lord Middleton, one of the Irish unionists who conferred with Eamonn De Valera in Dublin, Monday arrived here today and conferred with Premier Lloyd George.

In a brief interview given at Holyhead while enroute for London, Lord Middleton said:

"There is no reason to be dissatisfied with the progress made."

Premier Jan Christian Smuts of South Africa, who was recently proposed as mediator in the Irish strife, is expected at Dublin to confer with leaders of the Sinn Fein and unionist political factions.

Sir James Craig, premier of Ulster, did not attend the Dublin conference, having rejected De Valera's invitation. The other unionists who did attend were: Lord Middleton, Sir Maurice Dockrell, Sir Robert Woods and Arthur Jameson.

The only official information bearing upon the result of the conference was "there was agreements had been come to." The nature of the agreements was not explained.

In addition to Eamonn DeValera, Arthur Griffith, member of parliament, head of the Sinn Fein, was present. The next conference will be held Friday.

Most of the comment in the morning newspapers upon the new Irish developments was favorable, but a notable exception was the Morning Post. Under the heading, "Eating dirt," the Morning Post said:

"This is a measure of the depth of moral degradation to which the once proud country has fallen [illegible] a proposal can be [illegible] calmly debated in the English press. A GOOD FRIEND

A good friend stands by you when in need. Elyria people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. Mrs. Emma Wieland, of 971 E. River St. endorsed Doan's two years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony

"I suffered awfully with my back and any hard work just about killed me," says Mrs. Wieland. "When I did my housework, I could hardly endure the misery. My head ached badly and if I stooped over, I became dizzy. My kidneys were weak and I knew they were causing the suffering with my kidneys and back. When much out of sorts, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me."

No Trouble Since

Over two years later, Mrs. Wieland said: "I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for I am still enjoying good health with no return of the kidney trouble of which Doan's cured me."

The Verdict Dr. Pettit Gave to Lillian and Madge.

"MARION!"

The name of my friend's child came in an awe-stricken murmur from my lips, as, at my mother-in-law's behest, I turned from my own injured son to the couch where Lillian's idolized daughter lay so white and still that I feared the life had fled from her.

Lillian neither spoke nor looked toward me, and I followed her strained eyes to Dr. Pettit's face. It was professionally non-committal, but I saw with an icy little chill at my heart that he was making the usual tests to determine the existence or non-existence of the vital spark itself.

With Lillian's pallid, anguished face before me I felt guilty at the joy and relief which were surging madly through my veins. My child was safe, apparently, but here—I who knew better than any one else how closely knit were the hearts of Lillian and her adorable young daughter, felt my own heart chill as I watched the physician's long, slender, marvellously efficient hands at work.

"Ma—ma— tum Dooner. Dooner feel so-o bad."

The plaintive little cry tore at me. If any one ever had told me that I could refuse to go to my baby when he was injured and crying for me, I would have laughed scornfully, unbelievingly at the idea. But so long as he was in no danger, and in his grandmother's royally tender care, I could not desert my friend in her bitter hour.

Dr. Pettit straightened himself, and Lillian swayed toward him.

"Is—she—" the words were a raucous whisper from lips almost too stiff and white to frame them.

"Be Ready to Help."

"She is alive." He uttered the words with quick, crisp emphasis, put out his arm as he did so, and grasped and supported for a needed second Lillian's swaying, trembling figure. Then, as I moved forward, he put her into my arms, and she leaned against me for an instant with quick, labored breathing, as if she had been running. I remembered the attacks she had recently suffered, and I wondered how most quickly and quietly I could get the remedies she used, when she spoke tensely under her breath:

"I'm all right. Be ready to help."

She stepped away from me, and stood like a soldier at attention while the physician bent over Marion again. Even through the terror of the moment I could not help contrasting Dr. Pettit's professional aspect with his demeanor at other times. In any illness or accident he is a tower of strength, and one feels as safe as is humanly possible in his hands.

"Mr. Graham!" Dr. Pettit's voice, though low, was like a pistol shot, and Dicky came quickly forward.

"Yes," he said incisively.

"Can you drive my car?"

"Yes."

"The Utmost Haste."

"Then go to the nearest telephone—take Jerry Ticer with you, he will know where to go—tell the Southampton Hospital to send an ambulance here for me, with accommodations for two patients and one nurse, no interne. I shall go in it myself. Tell them I said the utmost haste was imperative."

"Two patients," Dicky demanded, even as he turned toward the door. "Then the baby—"

"I must have his arm X-rayed," the doctor replied curtly, "but he is in no danger whatever."

Dicky hurried through the door, and Lillian's anguished eyes rested on the physician's face. He had said the utmost haste was imperative. I knew what that meant, and so only too clearly did Marion's mother.

"I wish I could tell you anything definite, Mrs. Underwood." Dr. Pettit's voice was filled with infinite tenderness and compassion. "There is concussion, and the extent of that no one can tell now. There does not appear to be fracture, but I must have the radiograph's verdict upon that."

"Internal injuries? There were several bruises upon her body." Though Lillian's lips were still white and stiff, yet I saw that with the assurance of her child's being alive had come the rallying of her poise and efficiency. If there were anything to fight for, she would be at Dr. Pettit's side, unflinching, till victory or utter defeat.

"I saw them. You did good work in getting her undressed before I came," he commended. "They do not indicate any serious injury, but that is another matter which can only be determined later."

"Then there is nothing to do but to wait?" Lillian asked, and there was the despair in her voice which comes to those who can do nothing for loved ones in danger of death.

"Yes, you and Mrs. Graham must get ready at once to go to the hospital in the ambulance with the children. And you must take these. Mrs. Graham will give them to you."

He held out some pellets to me, and as I took them I knew that his shrewd eyes had seen the physical weakness Lillian was heroically concealing, and had given a spur for her flagging energies.

HOLD-UP MEN GET HAUL FROM CRAP SHOOTERS

MANSFIELD, July 5.—Police in surrounding cities have been asked today to be on the outlook for four colored and one white man, foot bandits who held up between forty and fifty crap shooters Sunday afternoon and got what is estimated to be from $1500 and $3000. The game was staged west of the city in a cool wood, with big players in attendance. Four colored men and one white man suddenly bore down upon the gang with a sharp command of "hands up." The men were lined up and covered with guns of three men while the other two raked in $1000 which was lying on the ground, then went through the pockets of the players. After getting the money and watches the bandits who were unmasked, ordered the men to jump across the little brook that flows thru the woods. The bandits went west along the Erie railroad tracks. It is supposed the crap bandits knew about the game.

COLUMBUS, July 5.—Two cartons, containing 140,000 cigarets, consigned to Yankie Brothers, Youngstown, were recovered by local deputy sheriffs. A farmer informed the officers that he saw the cigarets lying near a ravine two miles north of this city. Continuing their search of the ravine the officers found 60,000 additional cigarets. It is believed the cigarets were stolen from a freight car.

'MURDER QUEEN' SAYS WOMEN ARE MERCILESS

Women throughout the country have written Mrs. Kaber commending her wisdom in objecting to women on her jury, it was learned today.

"All women are cats" writes a woman from Montgomery, Ala.

"Until women learn to stick together and have mercy for one another they have no right to share man's privileges," writes anothher from Helena, Ark.

Seek Mystery Man

The trial of Mrs. Catherine Eva Kaber, Cleveland's so-called "murder queen" was resumed today with detectives seeking the "man of mystery" in the case.

Who is the college professor who turned "cave man" to woo the "murder queen," gave her temporary solace in her unhappy married life with Daniel Kaber, wealthy publisher and made her forget the love she retained for her first husband, Thomas McArdle, wealthy Chicago business man?

"He is the man of mystery." The state seeks his identity to learn whether to him Mrs. Kaber confided plans for getting rid of her invalid husband, Kaber.

He is or was a member of the faculty of Smith College, a famous educational institution for women, according to Mrs. Mary Wade, a fortune teller who will swear on the stand that Mrs. Kaber asked her to use "psychic vibrations" to kill Kaber, confessed to her that she never lost her love for McArdle and to her ears confided the affair with the college professor. Marian McArdle, Mrs. Kaber's 19 year old daughter, was a student at Smith College for a year.

Trial of Women

"The trial of women," the celebrated case has become known in Cleveland. Four women in the plot which resulted in Kaber's death and indicted for first degree murder; most of the witnesses on whose testimony the state relies to convict the "murder queen" are women; four women on the tentative jury and ten more on the new venire whose examination began today.

When court opened this morning after a five days recess, Mrs. Kaber's attorneys resumed their fight to secure "a womanless jury."

County Prosecutor Stanton predicted a jury would be had in a day or two.

Two of the three women whose freedom depends on the outcome of the trial invoke curses on Mrs. Kaber.

One is her own mother, Mrs. Mary Brickel, the 69 year old grandmother of the three generations indicted for first degree murder.

"She is hard—she should pay," the old woman says over and over again.

Girl Alone Cheerful

The other is Mrs. Erminie Colavito, fat and Italian, the "poison queen" who sold Mrs. Kaber the "magic medicine" which the state claims slowly sapped Kaber's strength and rendered him helpless as a hired assassin dug into his body twenty four times with a stiletto. Terrified at the thought of the death chair, the "poison queen" prays the "black" eye may destroy Mrs. Kaber, the court and the police.

Of the four women indicted only 19 year old Marian remains cheerful as the shadow of the death chair hangs over her. She remains steadfast in her loyalty to her mother.

City Hall

The city of Elyria finds itself hampered in the carrying out of plans for municipal improvements by the continued inactivity in the municipal bond market. For a considerable period of time the representatives of the various bond houses have been expecting an improvement in the market for municipal bonds and all have been playing more or less of a waiting game with the result that the City of Elyria, along with other municipalities and counties, has been unable to dispose of bonds, even through the maximum interest rate of six per cent is provided for such bonds.

On July 11, 1921, the city will receive bids for the purchase of $100,000 of 6 per cent. general paving bonds to pay the city's portion of the cost of street pavements and while the city hopes to receive a legal bid for the same, at the same time it is by no means certain that such will be the case as financial papers seem to be full of offers of 6 per cent bonds which have not been taken.

Board of Health

The report of the board of health shows contagious diseases in the city to be on the increase over two weeks ago. The following is the report for the past period:

Diphtheria, 1; mumps, 1; scarlet fever, 3; measles 3; chicken pox,1; typhoid fever, 1; tuberculosis, 2; whooping cough, 3.

General

The Business Review has attempted to set forth facts and figures which will permit its readers to make their own analysis of conditions. We have come to a period in the calendar year when business generally is slack. Slack business does not justify hesitation or indecision in one's effort to speed up business. A lost grip on trade is hard to regain. We are in a period which demands harder work, longer hours and a greater determination to get by. In other words, we are fast approaching normal when one's success is based on his persistent efforts to overcome the seemingly impossible.

"It was the pluckiest thing I ever see," Mrs. Ticer went on.

"Marion saw the horses, and she could have dodged them if she had been alone or had left the baby, for she's the lightest little thing on her feet I ever did see. But she never seemed to think of herself. I heard her say kind of soft, 'Oh, Junior!' Then she grabbed him and threw him one side as hard as she could. He struck in some boards Ticer had left to fix the porch, and his arm doubled up under him, and his head got a bump that made it bleed. But Marion—the horses went right over her. I heard her give one awful scream, and then she never made another sound, and when we picked her up she was just the way you see her."

As if controlled by the same impulse, Lillian's hands and mine had fallen apart. I turned to see in her eyes the same horror which had sprung into mine. It had been her child or mine, and hers—would she pay the supreme last penalty, while my motherhood went unscathed? For a second the vision divided us as far apart as the poles, then her face softened, and she put her hand on mine.

"Forgive me, Madge," she said. "For a second I hated you, but, of course, I know—oh! Marion! Marion!"

She clung to me for a shaken second or two, then went calmly, quietly back to her station by the side of her unconscious child, while I rushed to my little son, gathered him in my arms, and hushed his grieving wails. But my heart was so full of woe for the brave child who had saved mine that I could not feast my eyes upon his little face. Instead I must keep them watchfully upon Marion's still figure, while Dr. Pettit cross-questioned Mrs. Ticer.

"Yes, the same shade of blue appears in the hat," remarked Pam.

"Of what material is the hat made?" I asked, for I was busy sketching the dress.

"It's made of gray crepe de chine," said Pam. "But it's faced with blue and trimmed with tiny blue flowers, so that the color scheme of the costume is carried out."

Another girl overtook the lady in gray and slipped a lovely wrap about her shoulders.

"Does that cape go with the frock?" I asked Pam.

"Of course it does," said Pam. "It's made of the gray crepe de chine."

"And just look at the lining of blue chiffon! Isn't that adorable?" I questioned.

"It certainly is," answered Pam.

"How is the collar finished?" I asked.

"There's a bind of the blue and there are blue buttons with which to fasten it," Pam replied.

"I like that immensely. In fact, the fashion of wearing a matching cape with the summer frock is undeniably smart," I said.

"Yes, it is an attractive fashion," Pam remarked, as the lady in gray arranged her wraps about her in a fastidious manner.

"Sometimes it permits a pretty dash of color when the frock is all in one tone," I murmured.

"How?" asked Pam.

"Why, you can have a brilliant lining or you might applique some gorgeous decoration on its folds," I answered.

"That sounds interesting. Is there anything else you can suggest?" said Pam with a slight smile.

"Now that we have all the particulars of this pretty model we might have some tea," I remarked.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT "They're Made That Way"

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

"I HATE cats," said the little woman with the soft eyes. "They're such mean, sneaky, creepy, crawly, cruel, savage things.

"I saw one of them catch the prettiest little bird this morning and tear it to pieces—not because she was hungry, but because she was cruel and loved the fun of killing the pretty, harmless, little thing.

"If I'd had a pistol handy I would have shot that cat right then and there. I don't see how anybody can harbor such horrible beasts for a minute."

Her husband laughed indulgently.

"But, my dear," he said, "you can't blame the cats. They're made that way—they can't help it any more than a good, faithful dog can help being good and faithful. You ought not to hate an animal for what it can't help."

"Maybe I ought not," said the little woman, "but I do just the same."

That's just the way I feel about some people.

It is quite the fashion these days to say that thieves are thieves because they are born wrong, and a learned theorist entertained a roomful of rather intelligent people the other evening by telling us all that he believed nine out of ten criminals would have been decent, self-respecting men if they could have had some slight surgical operation in their early youth.

Perhaps he's right. Who am I to contradict him? But who is he to tell me that I must like thieves and entertain a feeling of respectful pity and kindly tolerance to burglars, forgers, murderers and the rest of the galaxy?

What of These?

I know a woman who can't be happy unless she's making some one else miserable. I have seen her miserable at the sight of another's happiness. Poor thing, I suppose she can't help it! She was made that way. But for all that I do not like her and never shall—and I don't want to be where she is or look at her or hear anything about her or even think of her.

I know a man who never made a business deal in his life without trying to cheat some one. And he began to cheat when he played marbles before he was 8 years old. He cheats his own family every time he gets a chance, and fairly hugs himself to think how clever he is to do it.

Poor man—I suppose I ought to be sorry for him, but I'm not.

I'm sorry for his family!

I know a woman who won't make herself agreeable at home—never and never, not she. She's always ill or blue, or hysterical or despondent about something. But let a stranger come in, and who so gay and full of spirits as she?

What's Your Opinion?

She spends her husband's money as if he picked it off a tree in the garden. She buys clothes that she doesn't need, hats that she doesn't want, candy that she can't eat, tickets that she never uses—just for the fun of letting her friends see her waste money.

How unfortunate she is to be so created, and yet, somehow, I'm so sorry for her husband that I haven't any "sorry" left to spend on her.

Very unreasonable and illogical and lacking in understanding of me—I admit it without a word of argument; but so it is.

You'll have to be sorry for me and make allowances, because, you see, I can't help it.

I was born so.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

How Some Housewives Are Banishing the Tablecloth with Pretty Results.

AFTER generations of women have spent many hours of anxious care on their table linens, the time-honored white tablecloth seems to be slowly and surely going out of fashion for informal affairs.

There are several good reasons responsible for the fact. One of these, perhaps, is the laundry problem. Good home laundresses are scarce, and there are but few who are experts. And constant laundering, carelessly done, eventually will ruin fine linens.

Some women are glad to dispense with the formal white cloth, for each and every occasion. Doyleys, runners and luncheon cloths may be used in many different ways, and are becoming very popular, especially with those who do their own housework.

Round cloths, edged with lace, may be made to fit the table tops. Table runners, also lace-edged, are well liked.

Russian linen, which is flax color, is one of the newest fabrics used for luncheon sets. These may be embroidered in colors harmonious with the decorations of the room. For instance, a set for a dining room decorated in browns and yellows may be developed in yellow linen. This may be cut lengthwise into two scarfs, which when used on the table are arranged in Greek cross fashion. These should be embroidered in browns, yellows and greens, and flower, fruit, vegetable or conventional designs may be used.

The china, also, is a deciding note in the choice of patterns and colors.

Chinese and Japanese straw sets are exceedingly popular. These may be plain or decorated in color designs.

Oilcloth mats still remain in favor.

With each of these sets the napkins chosen are the Japanese linens or those made of cotton crepe to match the embroidery. They are cut in the so-called breakfast size, twenty-seven inches, and are hemstitched.

Bolting cloth, delicately embroidered and finished on the ends with silk tassels, is a new idea for breakfast or luncheon sets. The cloths are used over a silkoline cloth, which shows the embroidery to good advantage.

Sets made of denim are excellent to use in country homes. The edges are fringed and the pieces are round. To fringe the doyleys the circle must be exactly measured, then a row of machine stitching run around the edge. Without this precaution the fringing would square the desired circle.

In cutting up a discarded white tablecloth of a raindrop pattern, an expert needlewoman of my acquaintance embroidered the dots in blue, and crocheted a blue scallop on the edges of the round doyleys and the centrepiece. When completed it was a beautiful and unusual set, and it harmonized perfectly with her blue dishes and the blue and white decorations of her dining room.

Another clever way to make a luncheon set is to buy filet lace curtain material. Select a pattern which is composed of little squares, the four-inch size being especially desirable. Cut four-inch squares for the glass doyleys. The bread and butter plate doyleys may be six inches square, while the plate doyleys are usually cut in the eight or ten-inch size. The centrepiece may be cut in any desired size. The doyleys and centrepiece are edged with lace. Not only are sets of this kind unusual, but they wear well and launder nicely.

There is much to be said in favor of the new idea in luncheon sets and the change from the large, formal, white cloths to the small, colorful ones is likely to be a welcome and a popular one.

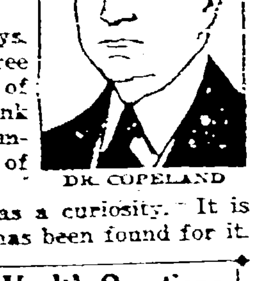
What That Curious Defect Color Blindness Really Is

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City



DR. COPELAND

WE used to read, now and then, of a terrible accident where an engineer drove past the signal light and dashed into another train, killing a lot of people. He may have been asleep in his cab. He may have been intoxicated. More likely he was color blind.

Such an accident is not common in these days. Shorter hours of labor have left the engineer free from the dangers of undue fatigue. The rules of transportation lines prohibited the use of strong drink even before the prohibition act. And the strict examination of enginemen has excluded the victim of color blindness.

Color blindness has become of interest merely as a curiosity. It is a strange condition and no satisfactory explanation has been found for it. It crops up in unexpected places.

When I was a small boy a cousin lived in a house within plain view of mine. We had read about signalling at sea, and it occurred to me it would be a good plan to devise a code and arrange a set of signals. We had red and blue and yellow and green and white squares of cloth. Their arrangement determined the message in accordance with our code. From above down, red, blue, yellow, green meant:

"Everybody has gone out. Come over and we'll have some fun."

It soon developed that my cousin couldn't read my signals and his signals meant nothing to me. At first we didn't understand why, but we discovered he was color blind and was incapable of telling red from green or yellow from blue.

Various theories have been advanced to explain color blindness. One theory is that in the seeing part of the eye—the retina—are three sets of color-receiving elements. These are set for the primary colors, red, green and violet, respectively. Each of these colors is recognized because of its stimulation of the corresponding element of the retina. All the other colors are made by combinations of the primary colors, and they are recognized by the eye because of the stimulation of two of the three receiving elements.

In color blindness one of these elements is lacking. For instance, red may not be recognized at all, and all the combinations in which red is included would lack this color. Yellow is made of red and green, but if the red element of the retina were lacking, yellow would be seen as green.

There is nothing to be done for one born color blind. It is exactly as if he were born with a missing finger, or as if he failed to cut the normal number of teeth. He simply lacks the color sense, and that is all there is about it. By patient training he may become capable of distinguishing lanterns showing the primary colors, depending upon the quantity and volume of light rather than upon the color itself, as we do.

Color blindness is not a disease. It is a natural defect, just as astigmatism and near-sightedness are natural defects.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am 24. I am in love with a young boy of 20. He is a beautiful dancer, but I cannot dance, as my parents do not allow me to.

I simply love to skate, and am considered the best skater in town. But the boy does not skate, and simply refuses to learn. What would you advise me to do? I am sure if this state of affairs keeps up he will lose all his affection for me, and that I am sure would break my heart.

HEART-BUSTED.

HEART-BUSTED: If the boy cares for you only for your accomplishments, my dear, or forgets you because of your liking for skating, I fear his affection is but skin deep, and the sooner you dispense with such shallow devotion the better for you.

FAMOUS "WITS" OF HISTORY

Little Stories of Men and Women Whose Sayings Are Still Remembered

By MARK STUYVESANT

A Glimpse of Three Generations in One Witty Family.

TRUE wit is so rare it is of interest to know that three of the best remembered wits of Ireland and England were a father, son and grandson. The first was Thomas Sheridan, an Irish clergyman, author and wit, who was born in 1687. The second, Thomas Sheridan, was an author, wit and actor. The last was the great playwright, actor, wit, orator and statesman, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who died in 1816.

Tom delighted to plague his father about money matters. The father was urging the son to marry a young woman of large fortune, but he knew that a poor young woman had won his son's heart. He dwelt at length upon Tom's folly, and ended by exclaiming:

"Tom, if you marry Caroline, I'll cut you off with a shilling!"

Tom could not resist giving voice to the reply which made him smile even to think of it. He said:

"Then, sir, you must borrow it!"

The father was so pleased by the quickness of the son's reply that he dropped the subject.

Although the younger Thomas Sheridan became an actor, and for a time was associated with David Garrick at Drury Lane, his chief interest in life was a system of education which he had evolved. Until his death Sheridan endeavored to interest the government in his methods, but without success. In his early days he devoted much time and study to evolving his system. Sometimes he worked so hard that he was in ill health.

It was during one of these nervous, irritable periods that his father and he were dining at the home of a friend who had a careless servant. This servant, in passing by the fireplace near which the table was set, knocked down the plate warmer. It made such a clatter that it caused the invalid to start and tremble.

The host rebuked the servant for the accident, adding:

"I suppose you have broken all the plates!"

"No, sir," said the servant triumphantly. "Not one!"

"Then, Sir, You Must Borrow It."

"Not one!" exclaimed Sheridan. "Then, hang it, you have made all the noise for nothing!"

When the second Thomas Sheridan's son, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, was a member of the House of Commons, he was one day annoyed by a fellow-member interrupting him every little while with cries of "Hear! Hear!"

Sheridan determined to teach this annoying individual a lesson. During the debate that day he took occasion to describe a political contemporary who wished to play rogue, but had sense enough only to act fool.

"Where," Sheridan exclaimed with great emphasis, "where shall we find a more foolish knave or a more knavish fool than he?"

"Hear! Hear!" the troublesome member shouted.

Sheridan turned around, and, thanking him for the prompt information, sat down amid a general roar of laughter.

Good Night Stories

THE RESTLESS LITTLE WATER FELLOWS.

OH, dear! Oh, dear!" exclaimed Tippy Tadpole. "I'm certainly tired of swimming around this way, day in and day out."

"So am I," cried his brother, Spotty Tadpole. "I can't see why some one doesn't teach us something to do besides swim all the time."

"Pooh! We might be able to do something if we had legs like honest folks have!" cried Taddy Tadpole, the largest of the three tadpoles.

"Legs!" exclaimed the other two. "Who ever heard of a tadpole with legs?"

"Certainly, all tadpoles must grow legs," replied Taddy Tadpole, disgusted at his brothers' ignorance. "And tadpole knows that!"

"Yes, I suppose so," sighed Tippy Tadpole.

"Why, of course, every tadpole should know that!" laughed Spotty. They felt terribly put out their education had been so neglected, for it was the very first time they had ever heard that tadpoles should have legs.

"Certainly we must grow legs to be real tadpoles," continued Taddy Tadpole. "And I'm going to find some one to teach me how to grow legs."

And away he swam through the water to the lily-pad, where a great, wise spider sat beside his web.

Spotty and Tippy lost no time, but followed close behind their brother.

"I'm Tired of Swimming."

My, how Mr. Wise Spider laughed when Taddy asked him how a tadpole could grow legs.

"First, you must learn why you want legs," Mr. Spider said as soon as he got his breath. "And that is so you can run errands and make other folks' burdens lighter for them. Now, if you can answer that question correctly, old Perch Witch will help you find legs."

Without another word Mr. Spider turned around and ran so far up on the highest petal of the lily that the tadpole boys couldn't make him hear them. They watched him a few minutes, then scooted through the water to Perch Witch's cave under the rocks at the bottom of the pond.

When they repeated the words of Mr. Wise Spider, Perch Witch laughed and sprinkled them with magic dew, and before the little tadpoles knew what was happening, each one began to grow four little legs.

These they used day after day, helping those about them until they grew to be quite respectable-looking legs, long and slender.

One morning they awakened to find their tails altogether gone, and in great excitement they hastened to Perch Witch, who quietly told them everything was as it should be.

"You have been three good, dutiful tadpoles," she said kindly, "and you have been rewarded accordingly. Tails would only be in your way. You are not tadpoles any longer, but real-for-sure—"

Here she hesitated, and opened Tippy's mouth and looked in. Then Perch Witch laughed and said:

"Well, you are a toad, and must live out in the meadows."

She looked in Spotty's mouth and pushed him over to one side with a merry twinkle.

"Yes, you have teeth on your upper jaw, so you're a frog, and must live in the pond here."

Taddy happened to be without teeth, so he and Tippy bade Spotty good-by and scrambled upon the bank and hopped away into the meadow.

"Funny that she knew just where we belonged," said Tippy. "Something about teeth!"

"Why, of course, silly!" croaked a wise old toad basking in the sun. "Toads have no teeth and frogs have on the upper jaw. Any one could have told you that."

The two toad boys waited for no more but hopped off into the meadows, and there you will find them almost any day hopping about among the grasses, happy as larks.

'STAR ROVER' AT AMERICAN

Third degree methods as practised by the police of many countries were pretty well known to Jack London, author of "The Star Rover," which is distributed exclusively by Metro Pictures Corporation at the American tomorrow

In his many wanderings around the world in search of adventure, London had frequent opportunities to see that underground aid of the authorities in action For the rough and ready travelers of the road, distrust of the "bulls" was inborn and any information they sought was certain to be refused Knowing this the cops frequently resorted to energetic methods in getting the information desired

One of the most painful forms of third degree inquisition is depicted in the gripping story of "The Star Rover" It consisted in being strung up by the thumbs with the entire weight of the body suspended from the cruelly tortured members

Jack London in his adventurous career first ran into this form of refined torture on an old sailing schooner where the hard boiled skipper had the habit of stringing up turbulent members of the crew allowing the lurching of the ship to keep them in plentiful suspense One treatment was usually enough

In his early days in beating his way across the country on trains London found different forms practised by the rail "bulls" and the uniformed police of the small towns where it would occasionally be his ill luck to be stranded The rougher the customer the rougher the treatment

The brutal treatment accorded the murder suspect in "The Star Rover" by his police captors was based upon an actual occurrence undergone by a "pal" of London's who ran foul of the officers who were sure he had been concerned in a jewelry theft Mixed in with the thumb stretching torture was the refined cruelty of never allowing the prisoner to get any sleep, by rousing him every time he started to doze and putting him through a rapid fire of questions.

"It's cheaper to rent than to buy" is a pet remark often heard But did you ever talk to a "cheaper to rent than to buy sort of a man ten years later?" LD INQUEST WEDNESDAY ON LORAIN DEATH

Dr. Miles Perry, coroner, has called an inquest to delve into the causes surrounding the death of Mrs. Isabelle Klenk, 65, 320 E. 22nd street, Lorain, who was run down and killed by an automobile last Wednesday.

Dr. Perry will open the inquest in the court house at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Twenty persons have been summoned.

L. A. Curley, 2652 Broadway, Lorain, whom police say drove the death car was still at liberty under $503 bail today.

Curley was arrested and arraigned in criminal court the day following the fatal accident. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

Authorities intimated today if Curley is found guilty of the charge against him police may go further and cause the arrest of the persons who sold him the intoxicants.

Mrs. Klenk was struck police say, by Curley's automobile when she alighted from a jitney bus. The car passed over her body and she died the following day in St. Joseph's hospital at Lorain.

Farmer's Sickly Little Girl Was Quickly Improved by Nerv-Worth

Father Says Stomach Trouble Relieved—Gained Weight.

"My little nine-year-old daughter had been troubled with stomach and bowel trouble for three years," said Miles J. Carter, Piqua, Ohio, and he continues: "We had tried a number of remedies without finding one that would help her, and we had given up hope of finding any relief for her, when we heard of Nerv-Worth. She has taken two bottles now, and is getting better and better since the first day she started to take Nerv-Worth. She has gained in weight and is more cheerful." The above statement is one of great weight to parents who have a child in a run-down condition, or suffering from ill health. Nerv-Worth is the ideal tonic for young or old. Its pleasant taste and beneficial effects make it exceptionally good for children. Remember Nerv-Worth is sold on a money-back basis, and if you are not satisfied with your first bottle, your druggist is authorized to refund your money.

NEW HOTEL FOR ELYRIA NOT FAVORED

Full endorsement of the hotel company was given by the Chamber of Commerce yesterday. The regular Friday noonday luncheon was held in the Chamber of Commerce at which time Mr. Mussey presented his plan and gave a well prepared talk on the hotel situation in this and other small cities. The company which owns the Hotel Andwur and the new Hotel Elyria, propose to sell $50,000 worth of stock to remodel and refurnish the hotels and establish them on a running basis. The Chamber, which is naturally slow to endorse any policy, appointed a committee of J. F. Glosser, C. L. Sotherden and A. J. Robson to investigate Friday afternoon the committee examined the financial statements, discussed the need of a new hotel here and gave the matter their full endorsement. The report was submitted to the board of directors of the Chamber who also endorsed the project.

From a purely financial standpoint, investment in the new project is advisable as well as from a desire to help Elyria.

An entirely new hotel is at present impossible for Elyria for obvious reasons and this manner of housing transients seems to be the only practical solution.

Hotels in Small Cities

It is a very natural and laudable ambition and desire of the resident and business man in a small but prosperous town to be able to point with pride to a new, handsome and modern hotel in his city, as representing the progress which is making toward the luxuries and conveniences of the larger communities. He is quite in assuming IdJdd that such a hotel, well conducted, is an advertisement of his town; that it has a tendency to draw transients from the nearby towns and that hence it is a benefit.

If such a house as he dreams of is built, it contains a large amount of space devoted to public uses, such as ball and banquet rooms, where public gatherings may be held, and a lobby ample in size to afford a meeting place for not only the guests of the hotel, but also for the townspeople. In a word, he wants for his town all the modern and expensive details of the great city hotels, but he fails to ask who is to pay for all this magnificence. That is, of course, in the end, the gist of the whole matter. Where is the financial support to come from? It will not come from the local residents, for they have their own homes and the necessity for patronizing the hotel seldom comes. The purchase of an occasional cigar or postage stamp and the use of the public telephone station comprises the financial support given by most of the local public. The lobby and the toilet rooms are considered as public conveniences and the cost to the hotel of their operation is not considered at all. Occasionally, a banquet may be given, on the visit of some celebrity, or by some local organization, but usually decided objection is made to paying the same price per plate as the larger city hotel demands and gets. A banquet in the small hotel is seldom a financial success, although it may be excellently prepared and served.

As to the patronage from transients: Few people stop in the small town from choice, no matter how excellent the hotel. They come because business demands it and they leave as soon as possible, labor under the common belief that because the town is small, prices should be likewise, forgetting or ignoring the fact that the cost of operation is greater in the small house than in the large, in proportion. The price of the accommodation is the point to which they cast their eyes, and they ask for clean, comfortable sleeping rooms at the lowest possible rate. They will not pay big city prices, even if the service be equal or better. They will visit the modern hotel, have their mail sent there, but they put up at the lower-priced house.

During the recent boom years, many small cities with the ambition for the dream hotel, have been approached by the professional hotel builders, desirous of converting the dream into the reality, with a substantial profit to themselves. We have a number of instances in this state, where the promoters have been successful and the new and much desired hotel has been built.

The professional hotel promoter's plan is to convince the business men of a small town that a fine hotel is imperatively needed and can be profitably operated. A meeting of the citizens is called, a stirring address is made by an adroit speaker, a subscription is started and a large sum is pledged toward the new hotel. When the necessary funds are at disposal, the promoting company erects and furnishes the hotel at a handsome profit. If further action is desired it will organize an operating company, selling stock to the citizens, with assurance of handsome profits. This operating company leases the hotel at an agreed percentage of the original cost. If it can make money, everything is lovely all around, but if it fails on account of too high overhead, the promoting company still has its profits undisturbed. But the citizens are confronted with the vision of a large and expensive white elephant. It is expensive to maintain proper hotel service unless a sufficient

Akron Citizen Expects To Always Give Tanlac the Highest Praise For Restoring His Health

"Tanlac has helped me so much that I've told all my friends about it, and I expect to always give it the highest praise," said B. F. Faust, of 194 Park avenue, Akron, Ohio.

"My stomach got out of order three years ago, and I commenced bloating so bad after meals it almost cut off my breath. I had severe pains through my chest when it seemed that I could hardly stand it, and nights I often had smothering spells when it seemed that my time had surely come. I often had to get out of bed and sit up the rest of the night in order to get my breath. I was hardly able to drag around and always felt drowsy and tired.

"But after taking three bottles of Tanlac I was entirely relieved of all that stomach trouble, and was eating everything I wanted without a bit of pain or distress. I went to work every day, and had such a fine appetite and felt so well I actually seemed like a different man. I sleep the whole night through and never have a weak spell. I am only too glad to say a good word for Tanlac."

OLUMBIA CLUB WINS TWO AND LOSES ONE BATTLE IN OVER HOLIDAY BALL GAMES

The I. T. S.-Columbia Club defeated the Elyria Federals 9 to 3 Sunday, trounced the Cleveland Morason and Billikins Monday morning 5 to 2 and were nosed out by the Holly-Krohns at Lorain Monday afternoon 8 to 7, in which the home team won out in the last inning. The Columbias would have had a clean sweep over the Holiday but errors were disasterious.

Sunday Games

Sunday the I. T. S.-Columbias beat the Federal A. C. 9-3 at Riverview Park. The Federals defeat was due mostly to errors four of their eight being made in the first inning and Chapman's pitching was a little too much for them. He allowed seven hits and struck out seven men.

Monday Morning

Owning to that the Gaiety is broken up the Morason and Billikens played here which are all mostly Gaiety players. Schroeder made home nice catches out in left. Tulk pitched an excellent game allowing but 3 hits and struck out 9.

Monday Afternoon

The locals were defeated in a home run contest of which five were made. Dragert, E. Tulk, Nichols, Fisher and Seneff. Most of Lorain runs were contributed by errors of which Halgren made two which it meant runs for Lorain. Reynolds made some nice catches on second. Dragert pitched a good game but Tulk was sent in there to win the game and struck out the third one hit.

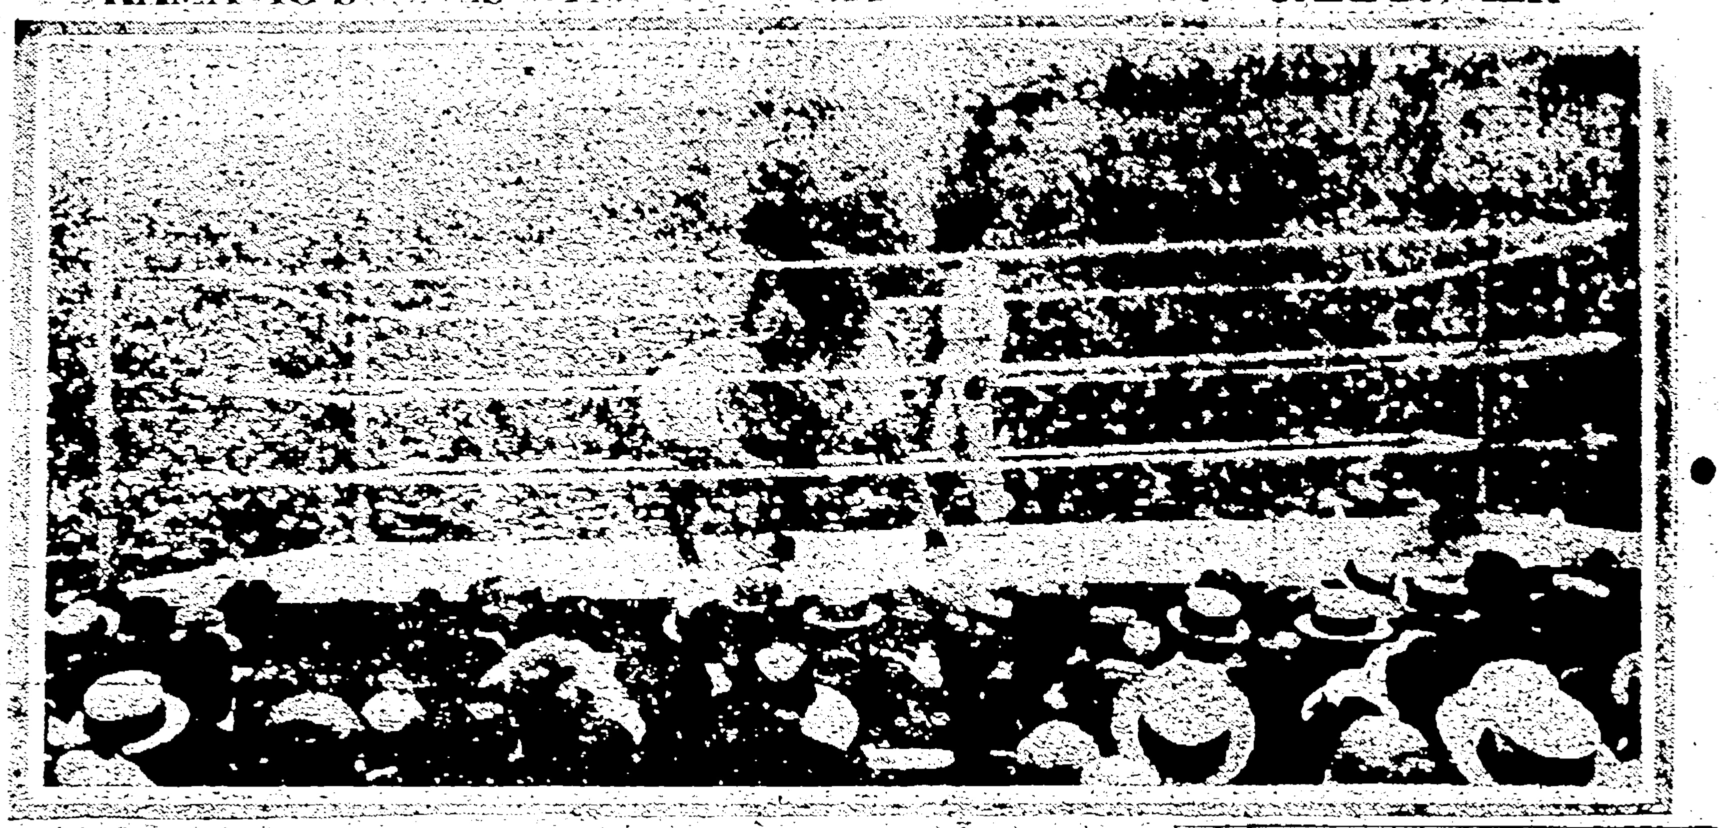
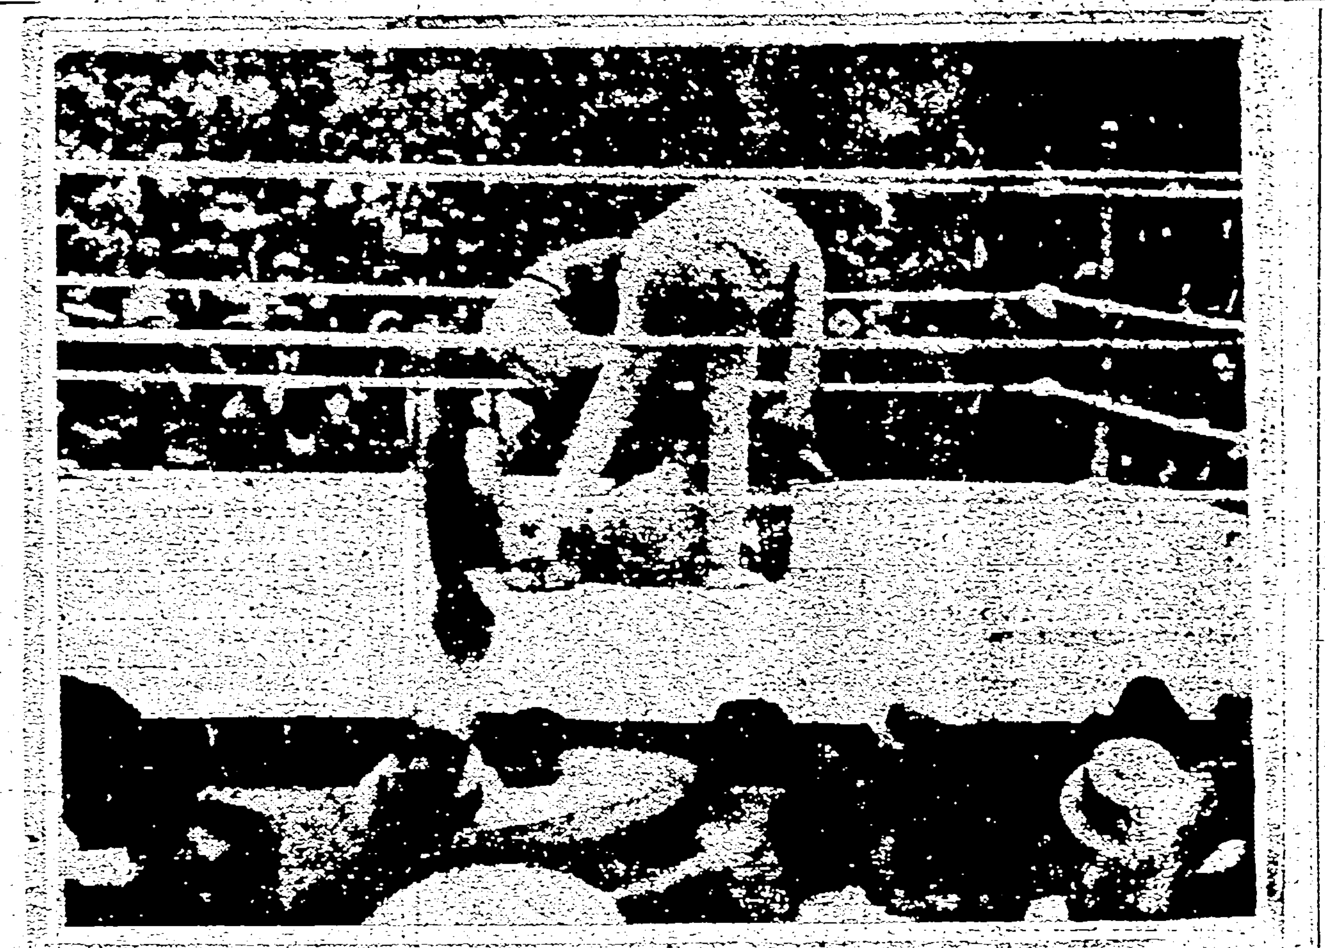
DRAMATIC SCENES WHEN DEMPSEY KNOCKED OUT CARPENTIER





The Chronicle-Telegram's megaphone party Saturday afternoon was an unqualified success, and the best one ever given in this city. Upwards of one thousand interested citizens in all walks of life crowded around the office on Second street and filled every available space to hear the "hot from the wire" report of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. And they were not disapointed.

Bulletins came in over the wire from the ringside as fast as the skilled operator on the special wire could receive it. First came the preliminaries, but the crowd did not take much interest in them. They were there to hear whether Jack Dempsey was to retain his title as the heavyweight champion of the world or whether Georges Carpentier, the Frenchman soldier challenger would be able to wrest it from him.

The crowd undoubtedly were favoring Carpentier, and when in the second round it was announced that Carpentier had won the round by terrific and scientific blows that staggered the champion, they cheered the game Frenchman.

The reports were full and complete. Every blow was recorded and the crowd was given a word picture of the events in the ring as fast as they took place, round by round. As fast as they were read the messages were telephoned to several places in the city who had requested that they be given the news. Amherst was given service by telephone, and they got the news within a few seconds after it was announced here.

When the fourth round was being read, a flash came that Dempsey had won by a knockout, a cheer went up and the crowd immediately melted away and spread the news throughout the city.

As fast as the news was received the battery of linotypes in the Chronicle-Telegram office were put at work and a complete story of the fight was issued from the big press that printed several thousand copies that were grabbed for eagerly by the public as they appeared in the hands of the newsboys on the street.

"Some service," said Judge Redington, as he listened to the bulletins and then took a copy of the paper home to read the story once more. This was the universal expression heard on every hand, and demonstrated the fact that the Chronicle-Telegram is a live up-to-date journal ready to serve the people at all times.

The service was also furnished Koplin's drug store on the West Side, Stolzenburg's Place. The Amherst News-Times and Oberlin.

H. A. DYKEMAN REVIEWS FIGHT

If you want to hear all about the Carpentier-Dempsey fight, drop around to the Ohio hotel this evening and hear the lecture by Joe McCracken, railroader, who occupied one of the long distance seats, but being a railroader was able to see very well. Joe has a vivid imagination, and a flow of descriptive language that holds the attention of his hearers all the way through. "It was a great fight," says Joe," and zowie, when that big boy belted Carpentier in the ribs as far back as I was I could hear them crack."

Henry Dykeman, State Fire Marshal also has this to say about the scrap: "Carpentier proved his [illegible]

ELYRIA FIREMEN TRIM VALLEY CITY

The City Firemen defeated the Valley City team 6-4 in a hotly contested game, Sunday, at Chippewa Lake. The heavy hitting of Smith and the tight pitching of Kershaw were features of the game. Kershaw did not allow the Valley City team to score after the first inning.

The Firemen will play the Federal A. C. at Cascade Park, Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

TOMMY GIBBONS MAY NOW MEET CARPENTIER

BY JACK VEIOCK
I. N. S. Sporting Editor

NEW YORK, July 5—Georges Carpentier and Tommy Gibbons, the hard socking St. Paul challenger for the heavyweight title, probably will be matched before the week ends.

This match is taking shape today and if clinched will be staged by Promoter Tex Rickard on Labor day.

Carpentier, little the worse for wear as a result of his defeat at the hands of Dempsey last Saturday is eager for another chance to show his wares to an American fistic audience and has expressed a desire to meet Gibbons who is nearer his weight.

Eddie Kane who manages Gibbons, said today that the St. Paul battler is willing to meet Carpentier at any time. Kane is here awaiting developments.

If Gibbons and Carpentier are matched they will battle in the same ring in which Jack Dempsey defeated the flashy challenger from across the seas before the greatest crowd that ever witnessed a sporting event in this country. Incidentally, Promoter Rickard's office announced today that the record crowd paid $1,623,380 to witness the scrap.

A meeting between Promoter Rickard, Descamps and Kane is expected today or tomorrow. Descamps announces that even though the match is made Carpentier probably will return to France for a few weeks to give his injured wrist a chance to heal completely after which he will come back to New York and start training.

Champion Jack Dempsey's plans are unsettled. Eventually the world's champion will hie himself to Salt Lake to visit his mother and father and later on go to the Pacific coast.

But he intends to relax around New York for a few days at least and may wait here until he gets a line on what Promoter Rickard can do in the way of a match for him later on.

Rickard said today that at present he is not considering a Willard Dempsey match as he has received word that Willard is in no condition.

"If Willard will prove to me that he can get into shape," said Tex, "it will be different."

The big arena at Boyle's thirty acres will not be dismantled. On the contrary it will be used on an average of every two weeks. Rickard has a Leonard-Tendler match in sight and is also planning a return match between Joe Lynch and Pete Herman.

Here's why CAMELS are the quality cigarette

BECAUSE we put the utmost quality into this one brand. Camels are as good as it's possible for skill, money and lifelong knowledge of fine tobaccos to make a cigarette.

Nothing is too good for Camels. And bear this in mind! Everything is done to make Camels the best cigarette it's possible to buy. Nothing is done simply for show.

Take the Camel package for instance. It's the most perfect packing science can devise to protect cigarettes and keep them fresh. Heavy paper—secure foil wrapping—revenue stamp to seal the fold and make the package air-tight. But there's nothing flashy about it. You'll find no extra wrappers. No frills or furbelows.

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And remember—you must pay their extra cost or get lowered quality.

If you want the smoothest, mellowest, mildest cigarette you can imagine—and one entirely free from cigaretty aftertaste,

It's Camels for you.

NEW HOTEL FOR ELYRIA NOT FAVORED

number of guests defray the bills. When experience has shown, however, that they will not do so, but will go to the old-established and cheaper house, the owners of the fine hotel have a problem to meet. Quite a number have found it a problem difficult of solution, for when practical hotel managers cannot see the possibility of profit, amateurs are at a loss.

The modern hotel, meeting the dreams of the small town, cannot be erected at a cost of less than five thousand dollars per room, to which must be added the cost of furnishings and equipment.

Unless a body of citizens consciously or unconsciously, donate several hundred thousand dollars for the good of the community with little hope of ever getting any return, such a hotel cannot be built. It has been repeatedly tied and the failues have been numeous. It is easy to cite a numbe of instances in this part of Ohio, where the civic pride in having a fine hotel has met with dire financial loss.

Elyria is but twenty-five miles from Cleveland. Many salesmen visiting here, live in Cleveland and return each night. They have little need for a hotel, except as a convenient place of meeting. Many residents here find themselves going to Cleveland to make their purchases instead of patronizing local merchants.

The demand for cheap accommodations leads many visitors to search for rooms at private houses or at the Y. M. C. A. They have their mail, telegrams and packages addressed to the hotel, but they do not spend their money there.

When the Elyria Savings & Trust Co. put up their new bank building next spring, Hotel Elyria will have less than sixty rooms available but Hotel Ely will have over sixty well-appointed, clean, comfortable rooms to take care of the business. Both hotels have been hotel locations for more than half a century and that alone is a big asset. Both are ideally located from the standpoint of the traveler. Each can be economically and profitably operated, because the sub-rentals pay nearly the entire rentals of both properties. The improvements contemplated in each will enable them to meet all the reasonable requirements of Elyria for many years to come. Some day, a new hotel will be built, but it is not now needed nor will be for some time.

The Elyria Hotel Co. is not asking for conscious or unconscious donations. It is offering preferred stock to carry out its plans for remodeling and refurnishing the two hotels already in existence and it offers a guarantee of a handsome financial return on the investment. With the sum asked for, we can produce the results desired and we have imposed no financial burden on the community.

Chamber Report

July 2, 1921

To the Board of Directors of
The Elyria Chamber of Commerce.
Gentlemen:

At the regular noonday meeting of the Elyria Chamber of Commerce on July 1st, when the hotel situation was discussed and the activities of the Elyria Hotel company set forth, it was unanimously voted by the members present to appoint a committee of three to report on the plans of the company. Your committee desires to make the following report:

1st. We have examined the statements made in the prospectus of the hotel company and firmly believe that the facts as set therein to be correct.

2nd. That the plan as set forth in this prospectus is in keeping with conservative business principles.

3rd. That this plan of financing [illegible] fortable hotel facilities for Elyria's present needs.

4th. The chairman of the permanent hotel committee of the Chamber reports that a new hotel project which would involve not less than a half million dollars, is out of the question for some time to come.

Since this is a semi-public movement which means a great deal to the city of Elyria, if successfully carried out, we recommend that the Board of Directors of the Elyria Chamber of Commerce approve this report and thus express the cooperation of the Chamber to the Elyria Hotel company in the selling of their securities to the citizens of Elyria.

Respectfully submitted,
Signed J. F. GLOSSER
C. L. SOTHERDEN
A. J. ROBSON

This report is hereby approved by the board of directors of the Elyria Chamber of Commerce, July 5, 1921.

ADMIRAL SIMS AND FREE SPEECH

We note that Admiral Sims at Newport on the ourth made an address in which he declared that the ficers of the armed forces of America should be allowed blic criticism as a safeguard to public interests. If dmiral Sims makes a general declaration here in favor free speech we are with him but even if the officers the navy were permitted general public criticism he ould not add to the prestige of the navy nor to his own rmanent fame by such an attack as he made upon llions of good American citizens who happened to ffer with him on one particular question.

It is quite significant that the news carried state-ents of other speakers at other points urging the peo- to be very careful as to what public utterances they rmitted themselves to listen to and which statements ndemn the utterances of radicals. Some people would ll Sim's statement the utterance of a radical. Eacl an believes that the statement of the other man ose opinion he does not agree with is pretty much statement of an extremist or a radical. The cure at is proposed by these narrow minded, self-opinion ed, self-satisfied men is that of stopping the mouths all those who do not agree with them and putting em in jail, if not hanging them.

If this class of men had lived in 1776 or if they had en in the majority in this country at that time, the amers of the Declaration of Independence would have been in jail and probably hung.

It is real refreshing under such circumstances to ad the statement of Bishop Williams of the Episcopal urch when speaking on Americanism in the city club en he declared that in the panic and hysteria imme-ately following the war, a kind of Americanism had en advanced which denied the underlying principle of al Americanism. He pleaded for the extension of the blic open forum dedicated to free speech as the anti-te to many of the ills of political and industrial life e declared. "There are two dangers confronting the na-on at this time, the danger of the revolutionist and the nger of those opposed to free speech, whether in the hool, the pulpit or the press. The danger of the re-lutionist is rather negligible, but the danger of those ho would curb free speech is immediate and great."

Gamaliel, the great teacher of Paul in Jerusalem s a pretty safe guide and undoubtedly Paul gained nsiderable of his practical common sense from him. As me of the disciples were about to be harshly dealt th by the mob for their public utterances, he urged e mob to let them alone for, as he truthfully and wise said, "If their words be false or not of God they will me to naught and if they are of God we shoud let them one lest haply we fight against God."

The sunlight of truth dissipates error, and truth n not be hemmed in or throttled, however much we ay endeavor to hamper it, hence, open discussion and ee speech is one of the corner stones of our liberty.

THE WET PARADE

Now comes the wet parade in New York city sched-ed to have five hundred thousand in line, and then ter it was declared that there were to be at least one undred thousand in line. But it dwindles, by actual unt, to fourteen thousand nine hundred and twenty o out of a city of several millions.

Undoubtedly many of these joined in the parade they'll join any parade that gives them an opportun-y to march before the multitude.

There are many in New York who do not believe in e National Prohibition law who did not march in this m pageant but it is quite a significant fact that in ite of all the advertising, in spite of all the money at was expended, and in spite of all the effort that was t forth there was comparatively but a handful whose evotion to Bacchus was sufficient to cause them to ake spectacle of themselves and march down under boiling hot sun to the plaudits of the men with an petite.

ANXIETY AND ILLNESS.

Worry, anxiety, stress and strain as directly conduce to disease as does disease itself, is dictum handed down by the London Times thru its "Medical Correspondent," in analysing the results obtained in England in studying the so-called "shock" exhaustion.

We cannot well afford to overlook these considerations at a moment when worry and anxiety lurk in almost every hour of the day, says the writer. It may seem a long step from the income-tax to, say, an attack of pneumonia, yet the two are not necessarily unrelated. Strikes and rumors of strikes, trade depression, the threat of civil disturbance—all exercise their effect on the human organism. Because of each or any of them an expenditure or nervous energy must be made.

This does not perhaps signify much so long as restoration equals loss. All the recent work has gone to show that the great restorative is sleep. There is no substitute. But restless days mean too often restless nights. Exhaustion begins to show itself in a general uneasiness, a spasmodic and futile activity.

The mischief of our present conditions is that the victim of financial troubles cannot escape from them, often he feels he can scarcely afford the expense of a cessation of work. His mind is kept continuously "on the stretch."

When sleep fails, his position is indeed serious. Thus the greatest need of our time is, perhaps, refreshing sleep. If we sleep well, we shall make up at night for the stresses and strains of the day. If we lose sleep and darkness will become darker and disease, ever watchful for its victims, will bear us down.

Insomnia is pretty frequent at present, and so also is troubled, unrefreshing sleep. The remedies are not easy to suggest, for this is so much a personal matter. But many find that an upper room is better than a lower one, a house situated on a hill than one placed in the valley. Some again, believe in reading as a preliminary to rest, and if a foreign language be chosen the result is said to be better still. Hypnotics offer but a poor substitute.

ODD LURE FOR TROUT.

"Man, sirr, he's as lang as the barrel o' my gun!" cried Sandy the keeper.

We were leaning over the parapet of the Auld Brig which spans a Perthshire river beloved of local anglers, writes an angler in the London Daily News. But though its trout are plentiful and full of fight there is no denying that they run small, therefore my surprise was equalled by my incredulity when Sandy swore by all his gods that in the deep, black pool under the Auld Brig there lurked a monster with a body as long as the barrel of his gun.

However, Sandy was for once fairly truthful. The very next morning when crossing the brig and pausing, as was my habit and wont, to peer into the black pool, a bright glimpse of a huge trout. It was but a momentary vision for which a flick of his tail he instantly disappeared into the shadows. But a monster trout it undoubtedly was, weighing, I said to myself at least 8 pounds! Most extraordinary! And thereupon I determined upon his undoing.

"For over a fortnight I fished the pool. I was at it when the first glow of dawn broke over the snow-streaked mountains, I was at it when night fell over the dreary moorland. Lures of every kind known—and unknown—to angling science, flies of every size and hue minnows alive and dead, I tried and tried in vain! Even the fine, fat lobworm I did not despise—but the trout did emphatically! Never once did he so much as show me the point of his snout.

"Sitting despondently over the fire one evening, after another weary day of fruitless toil, I listlessly turned over my tackle. Was there any lure which I had overlooked. I opened a tin which had been the temporary home of gentles used in roach-fishing. In the corner were a few small brown objects—gentles once, chrysalides now, see only to hatch into bluebottle flies.

"Hope springs eternal in the angler's breast. "By Jove, I'll try them," said I, "Tomorrow morning."

"Tomorrow morning was cold and raw exceedingly, a bitter wind, laden with small, hard snowflakes was blowing down the glen, but day-dawn saw me at the black pool and saw the capture of the famous trout!

"No sooner had the gentle-chrysalis bluebottle dropped into the water than there was a rush and a swirl—and then ensued a struggle grim and great lasting for the better part of half an hour. But are not such Homeric conflicts written in the Book of the Chronicles of every lover of the gentle art. Suffice it to say that at least the monster was triumphantly landed on the granite rock beneath the Auld Brig."

Sheriff Backus recovered a stolen automobile on July 4th, the car having been left in a farmer's yard at Henrietta a few days ago. The car was left by two young men who said they had tire trouble and would be back in a short time. That was the last seen of them and Sheriff Backus was notified.

He looked up the license number and found the machine had been stolen from J. P. Renny, of Youngstown last Monday.

COLUMBUS— Although wholesale prices for ice cream have dropped 20 cents per gallon here this year, no reduction has yet been made in prices to ultimate consumers. The second 10 cent decline is effective here this week. Retail merchants down town explained that operating expenses prevent reducing prices to ultimate consumers now. BAD FOR CITY

"I know of no greater curse of the business interest of a community than where agitators, by whatever name you may call them, some running for one office, some for another, have been allowed, without answer, to disseminate alleged facts in derogation of practical legitimate utility development," says James A. Perry, of Atlanta, Ga., president of the National Association of Railway and Utility Commissioners.

"I would say to the public, get our utility development as we may, the fact remains we are going to pay a reasonable return on the fair value of the property used in giving the service. It makes no difference whether it is municipally owned, home-ruled or privately owned and regulated."

BAD FOR CUSTOMER

"When politics rides the utilities as a campaign horse," says the Chicago Tribune, "it is bound to be a bad thing for the rate payer. There is not likely to be the required amount of honesty and fair dealing."

That the above statements are true is self evident.
Don't let yourself be fooled by some ambitious politician with a fine line of talk.
